PASSAGE (Q. No 12 to 15)

PASSAGE 1

Arifa lived in a coastal village where most families depended on fishing. Her father owned a small boat, and every evening, Arifa watched him prepare nets for the next day's journey into the sea. She often heard him say that the sea was both a friend and a challenge— sometimes generous, sometimes stormy. One year, the fishing season was bad. The number of fish decreased, and many fishermen struggled to earn enough. Arifa felt sad seeing her father worried. At school, her teacher explained how pollution and overfishing were harming marine life. Arifa shared this knowledge with her father and suggested using eco-friendly nets that allowed small fish to escape and grow. The fishermen agreed to try the new method. Slowly, the fish population improved, and the village recovered. Arifa realised that awareness and small changes can protect nature and people's livelihoods.

Q.12. What did Arifa's father do for a living?

(a) Carpenter (b) Fisherman (c) Teacher (d) Farmer

Q.13. Why was the fishing season bad one year?
